Restricted Foreign Jurisdiction Procedures

Creditor Q&A Regarding the Restricted Foreign Jurisdiction Procedures

What happens if I reside in a Potentially Restricted Foreign Jurisdiction?

Your claim will continue to be treated as disputed until the status of the Potentially Restricted Foreign Jurisdiction is resolved and your Claim is otherwise Allowed or Disallowed.

Can I object to the designation of my jurisdiction as restricted?

Yes, you must file an objection within 45 days from the date the Restricted Jurisdiction Notice is filed and include a sworn statement waiving service of process and submitting to the Court's jurisdiction.

How can I remedy my residency during the Restricted Period?

You may resubmit your KYC and other required information for recertification if your residency changes, or you may sell or transfer your claim, pursuant to the Plan, to a party in an unrestricted jurisdiction, within the 180-day restricted period following any applicable Distribution Date in which case prior and future distributions and associated interest will be payable to the claims buyer or transferee.

What if I disagree with the FTX Recovery Trust's determination of my residency?

You may file a properly served pleading disputing the determination. The matter may be referred to a Special Master for resolution on an individual basis.

What happens if my claim status changes during the Restricted Period?

If verified before the 180-day period ends, you may receive the held distribution and future ones in a subsequent distribution. If not, the distribution and all associated postpetition interest is forfeited.

What happens if I sell or transfer my claim?

If you sell the claim to a Holder in an unrestricted jurisdiction, the claim remains eligible to receive distributions after being held during the Restricted Period and future Distributions, but not any Distribution or associated interest previously forfeited pursuant to these procedures.

Can I provide a bank account in an unrestricted jurisdiction in order to receive Distributions?

No, eligibility for distributions in a Restricted Foreign Jurisdiction is based on a review of information submitted in connection with satisfaction of KYC and other Pre-Distribution Requirements set forth in the Plan, not the location of a Holder's account.
